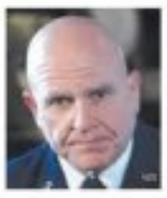
MCMASTER: TIME FOR TOUGH TALKS WITH RUSSIA



1 White House national security adviser H.R. McMaster said on Sunday it was time for tough talks with Russia over its support for Syria's government and its "subversive" actions in Europe. Speaking on ABC News' "This Week" program, McMaster said Russia's backing of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad's government has perpetuated a civil war and created a crisis that has bled over into Iraq, neighboring countries and Europe. "So Russia's support for that kind of horrible regime, that is a party to that kind of a conflict, is something that has to be drawn into question as well as Russia's subversive actions in Europe," McMaster said. "And so I think it's time though, now, to have those tough discussions Russia." REUTERS

US WEIGHS OPTIONS AFTER N. KOREA MISSILE TEST

2 The U.S., its allies and China are working together on a range of responses to North Korea's latest attempted ballistic missile test, President Donald Trump's national security adviser said, citing what he called an international consensus to act. "We are working together with our allies and partners and with the Chinese leadership to develop a range of options," national security adviser H.R. McMaster said on "This Week." "This latest missile test just fits into a pattern of provocative and destabilizing and threatening behavior on the part of the North Korean regime," McMaster said. He said the president has asked the national security council to integrate the efforts of the Defense and State departments and U.S. intelligence agencies to develop options if "this pattern of behavior continues. TOP US COURT TACKLES RELIGIOUS RIGHTS

3 The U.S. Supreme Court is set this week to hear a closely watched case testing the limits of religious rights, and new Justice Neil Gorsuch's judicial record indicates he could tip the court toward siding with a church challenging Missouri's ban on state funding of religious entities. Gorsuch, who embraced an expansive view of religious rights as a Colorado-based federal appeals court judge, on Monday hears his first arguments since becoming a justice last week. He will be on the bench on Wednesday when the justices hear the Trinity Lutheran case, one of the most important of their current term. Gorsuch, appointed by President Donald Trump, restored the Supreme Court's 5-4 conservative majority. REUTERS

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

BABY BOY

4 After weeks of suspense, April the giraffe finally gave birth on Saturday to a baby boy, delighting hundreds of thousands of people who have been monitoring a live cam feed from a New York zoo in anticipation of the long-overdue event. April, who had been due to give birth in January or February at Animal Adventure Park in Harpursville, in western New York, was pregnant for at least 16 months, compared with the typical gestation period of 15 months, according to zoo officials.

TURKEY'S ERDOGAN DECLARES VICTORY

5 President Tayyip Erdogan declared victory in a referendum on Sunday to grant him sweeping powers in the biggest overhaul of modern Turkish politics, but opponents said the vote was marred by irregularities and they would challenge its result. Turkey's mainly Kurdish southeast and its three main cities, including the capital Ankara and the largest city Istanbul, looked set to vote "no" after a bitter and divisive campaign. Erdogan said 25 million people had supported the proposal to replace Turkey's parliamentary system with an all-powerful presidency, giving the "yes" camp 51.5 percent of the vote. That appeared short of the decisive victory for which he and the ruling AK Party had aggressively campaigned. Nevertheless, thousands of flag-waving supporters rallied in Ankara and Istanbul in celebration. REUTERS

Boston Marathon Guide: Where to watch

You won't miss out on any of the Marathon Monday action in these spots.

ERIN TIERNAN
@ErinTiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

Over half a million spectators are expected to turn out somewhere along the 121st Boston Marathon route on Marathon Monday to cheer on racers.

Though the Boston Athletic Association says there's ample room along each and every mile of the 26.2-mile course, it pointed out a few of the more famous spots to watch — Wellesley Scream Tunnel just before the halfway, Heartbreak Hill in Newton around Boston College and (of course) the final stretch on Boylston Street right leading up to the finish line.

Depending on whether you're looking out for a specific runner or if you're just there to watch, the BAA has a few tips to help make your race day experience one for the books.

Sign up for AT&T Athlete Alerts: This will help you spot runners you want to see on the course and give you updates throughout the day on where your favorite runners are, and when they may be approaching.

Plan ahead: The MBTA is a good way to get around the course on Marathon Monday, as the majority of roads will be closed all day along the Boston Marathon route. The T and commuter rail are also your best bets for seeing runners at multiple spots.

Know your numbers: Know your runner's start wave, corral and bib number. This information will help you follow along with the projected time calculator.

Here's a list of the best time and place to watch the Boston Marathon in each of the eight communities it runs through, according to the BAA:

More than 500,000 people are expected to watch the 121st Boston Marathon. FLICKR

Hopkinton: The starting line. Arrive early because 30,000 runners will be filtering through here.

Racers will be departing from the starting line beginning at 9:17 a.m. until the fourth wave heads out at 11:15 a.m.

Ashland: If you time it right, spectators can see their favorite runners pass by on Main Street. The best time to watch here is from 9:27 a.m. until 11:42 a.m.

Framingham: The best place to watch is at the train depot in the center of town from 9:37 a.m. through 12:12 p.m.

Natick: The most picturesque spot to watch here is along Lake Cochituate at the 9-mile mark between 9:49 a.m. and 12:43 p.m.

Wellesley: The best place to watch here is at Wellesley College at the Scream Tunnel. Most runners will be passing through between 9:59 a.m. and 1:10 p.m.

Newton: You'll want to cheer from the infamous Heartbreak Hill to help runners over the hump. Most runners will be passing through between 10:25 a.m. and 2:19 p.m.

Brookline: Coolidge Corner is the signature spot to watch on Beacon Street. Most runners will be heading through between 10:35 a.m. and 2:45 p.m.

Boston: If you can get a spot along the final half mile leading up to the finish line, this is where you'll see the magic happen. Runners will be passing by here between 10:41 a.m. and 3:04 p.m.

Boston Marathon will retire bib number worn by trailblazing runner Kathrine Switzer

Boston Marathon bib No. 261 has been imbued with meaning since Kathrine Switzer wore it in 1967, when she became the first woman to be officially registered and run in the race.

Now, the same year that the trailblazing Switzer is again running in the Boston Marathon, the number will be officially retired.

The Boston Athletic Association announced the honor on Thursday. It is a long way from Switzer's first run 50 years ago, when an angry race official attempted to rip the number off her shirt.

Switzer had registered for the marathon not with her first name but with her initials, which kept her gender hidden from marathon officials.

Women were not allowed to run in the Boston Marathon then, and weren't officially allowed into the race until 1972.

Switzer wasn't technically the first woman to run the Boston Marathon, however. Roberta Gibb had run the race secretly the year before without an official number.

This year, Switzer will run in Monday's event to mark the 50th anniversary of her pioneering race. Now 70, she completed 39 marathons since that run in Boston, and also started an organization called 261 Fearless, a nonprofit that brings together women runners.

This year is the 121st Boston Marathon, and in its history, the association has only retired one other number, according to the Associated Press.

That was No. 61, honor long-distance runner John Kelley, who ran 61 Boston Marathons.

TRUMP'S AMERICA

TRUMP'S AMERICA: TWEET THIS ... IT'S COMPLICATED

OPINION

ELLIS HENICAN

President Donald Trump is finding that many domestic and foreign issues are complicated. GETTY IMAGES

Donald Trump loves his Twitter. Everybody knows that. He's been adamantly tweeting his gut reactions, 140 frantic characters at a time.

But with his first 100 days quickly winding down, our Twitter-happy president is suddenly finding refuge — on Facebook this time.

"It's complicated" is Trump's new go-to phrase.

That purposely opaque formulation has been employed by millions of Facebook users who want to duck the profile question: "Relationship status?" Instead of "married" or "single" or "in a relationship," they chose the classic two-word dodge: "It's complicated."

Well, check this out: From China to Obamacare, from Vladimir Putin to Kim Jong-un, our cocksure president is dishing up that very same Facebook obfuscation: It's complicated … far more complicated than I imagined … more complicated than anybody knew.

North Korea's nuclear threat? "After listening for 10 minutes" to Chinese president Xi Jinping, Trump told The Wall Street Journal, "I realized it's not so easy. I felt pretty strongly that they had a tremendous power over North Korea. But it's not what you would think." None of this is easy, he complained. "The magnitude of everything is so big, and also the decisions are so big, you know, you're talking about life and death."

And this comes as a major surprise?

We got our first glimpse of "it's complicated" as Trump was struggling to repeal and replace Obamacare, which he'd promised to do on Day 1. "Now, I have to tell you, it's an unbelievably complex subject," he told the nation's governors at the White House. "Nobody knew health care could be so complicated."

Actually, lots of people knew. Hillary Clinton. Barack Obama. Pretty much anyone who'd ever taken a breath in Washington over the past two decades. But it's not just health care. Lots of things are complicated down there. Immigration policy. The Middle East. Terrorism.

Nuclear proliferation. The march of technology. The decline in manufacturing. The role of China in our economy. The squeeze on working-class jobs. Tax policy. Social issues. Paying for stuff. You name it. It's all complicated.

If these problems were easy, don't you think they'd have all been solved years ago?

New Men's Sex Pill Makes Viagra Obsolete

Scientific advance made just for older men. Works on both men's physical ability and their desire in bed.

By Harlan S. Waxman
Health News Syndicate

New York – If you're like the rest of us guys over 50, you probably already know the truth... Prescription ED pills may work, but they don't solve all the problems in the bedroom and they are very expensive. Dr. Bassam Damaj, chief scientific officer at the world famous Innovus Pharma Laboratories, explains, "As we get older, we need more help in bed. Not only does our desire fade; but erections can be soft or feeble, one of the main complaints with prescription pills. Besides, they're expensive... costing as much as $50.00 each."

Plus, it does nothing to stimulate your brain to want sex. "I don't care what you take; if you aren't interested in sex, you can't get or keep an erection. It's physiologically impossible," said Dr. Damaj.

MADE JUST FOR MEN OVER 50

But now, for the first time ever, there's a pill made just for older men. It's called Vesele®. A new pill that helps you in bed by stimulating your body and your brainwaves. So Vesele® can work even when nothing else worked before.

The new men's pill is not a drug. It's something completely different.

Because you don't need a prescription for Vesele®, sales are exploding. The maker just can't produce enough of it to keep up with demand. Even doctors are having a tough time getting their hands on it. So what's all the fuss about?

JAW-DROPPING CLINICAL PROOF

	Vesele	Baseline
Overall Satisfaction	88.1%	41.4%
Frequency of sex	79.5%	44.9%
Desire for sex	82%	47.9%
Hardness during sex	85.7%	36.2%
Duration of erection	79.5%	35%
Ability to satisfy	83.3%	44.1%

WORKS ON YOUR MIND AND YOUR BODY

The new formula takes on erectile problems with a whole new twist. It doesn't just address the physical problems of getting older; it works on the mental part of sex too. Unlike the expensive prescriptions, the new pill stimulates your sexual brain chemistry as well, actually helping you regain the passion and burning desire you had for your partner again. So you will want sex with the hunger and stamina of a 25-year-old.

THE BRAIN CONNECTION

Vesele® takes off where Viagra® only begins. Thanks to a discovery made by 3 Nobel-Prize winning scientists, Vesele® has become the first ever patented supplement to harden you and your libido. So you regain your desire as well as the ability to act on it.

In a 16-week clinical study, scientists from the U.S.A. joined forces to prove Nitric Oxide's effects on the cardio vascular system. They showed that Nitric Oxide could not only increase your ability to get an erection, it would also work on your brainwaves to stimulate your desire for sex. The results were remarkable and published in the world's most respected medical journals.

THE SCIENCE

The study asked men, 45 to 65 years old to take the main ingredient in Vesele® once a day. Then they were instructed not to change the way they eat or exercise but to take Vesele® twice a day. What happened next was remarkable. Virtually every man in the study who took Vesele® twice a day reported a huge difference in their desire for sex. In layman's terms, they were horny again. They also experienced harder erections that lasted for almost 20 minutes. The placebo controlled group (who received sugar pills) mostly saw no difference.

AN UNEXPECTED BONUS: The study results even showed an impressive increase in the energy, brain-power and memory of the participants.

SUPPLY LIMITED BY OVERWHELMING DEMAND

"Once we saw the results we knew we had a game-changer said Dr. Damaj. We get hundreds of calls a day from people begging us for a bottle. It's been crazy. We try to meet the crushing demand for Vesele®."

VESELE® PASSED THE TEST

"As an expert in the development of sexual dysfunction, I've studied the effectiveness of Nitric Oxide on the body and the brain. I'm impressed by the way it increases cerebral and penile blood flow. The result is evident in the creation of Vesele®.

New men's pill overwhelms your senses with sexual desire as well as firmer, long-lasting erections. There's never been anything like it before.

It's sure-fire proof that the mind/body connection is unbeatable when achieving and maintaining an erection and the results are remarkable" said Dr. Damaj.

HERE'S WHAT MEN ARE SAYING

- I'm ready to go sexually and mentally.
- More frequent erections at night and in the morning.
- I have seen a change in sexual desire.
- Typically take 1 each morning and 1 each night. Great Stamina, Great Results!
- An increased intensity in orgasms.
- My focus (mental) has really improved... Huge improvement.
- Amazing orgasms!
- I feel more confident in bed.

HOW TO GET VESELE®

This is the first official public release of Vesele® since its news release. In order to get the word out about Vesele®, Innovus Pharma is offering special introductory discounts to all who call.

Hernandez cleared of double murder, but to remain in prison

The former New England Patriots star is still serving a life sentence for a 2013 murder.

Former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez blows a kiss to his fiancee Shayanna Jenkins from the defense table during jury deliberations in his double murder trial. GETTY IMAGES

New England Patriots star Aaron Hernandez has been cleared of murdering two men outside a Boston nightclub in 2012, but prosecutors said the victims' families are somewhat relieved that he won't be freed from prison.

Hernandez is still serving a sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole for killing an acquaintance in an industrial park near his home in June 2013.

His attorneys have appealed for a new trial in that case. An appeal cannot challenge the decision of the jury to convict Hernandez. It must cite errors committed by the judge in his rulings during the trial.

First-degree murder convictions, such as the case of Hernandez, are rarely overturned upon appeal.

On Friday, a Boston jury declared Hernandez not guilty of the 2012 double murder of Safiro Furtado and Daniel Abreu is a case that was primarily based on the testimony of Alexander Bradley, who received immunity to testify.

Bradley told jurors he was in a car with Hernandez when he shot Abreu and Furtado.

Hernandez was convicted of a single weapons possession count in the case. He was immediately sentenced to an additional four to five years in prison and led from the courtroom with tears streaking down his face.

Gasps were heard from the gallery when the initial verdicts were read, and members of the victims' families were led out of the courtroom, also in tears.

"What won this case was a dearth of evidence that connected Hernandez to these shootings," Ron Sullivan, a member of his defense team, told reporters after the verdicts.

Dan Conley, district attorney of Suffolk County, said the not-guilty verdicts show the difficulty of solving a drive-by shooting.

"Our theory of this case stands," he told reporters, "It points inescapably to Hernandez."

Selena Gomez and The Weeknd's Coachella PDA is a lot

INSTAGRAM/@ SELENAGOMEZ

PDA is the only way to prove that you care about someone. Especially if there are paparazzi around. So Selena Gomez and The Weeknd went to Coachella to go make out. Duh!

The "Wizards of Waverly Place" actress shared a rare picture of her and boyfriend The Weeknd — real name Abel Tesfaye — on Instagram with their arms wrapped around each other. And the kids went wild: The snap has already garnered 5.3 million likes, which, to be honest, is excessive.

"She wants the world to know they're together," a source tells Us Weekly. "She only does that when she's really dating someone." You mean, she only wants people to know she's with someone when … she's with someone? My, my. Kids these days.

I have zero investment in this relationship, but if it's going to give Gomez the social media revenge against Justin Bieber she needs, so be it.

Janet Jackson wants you to know she's totally fine

TWITTER/@ JANETJACKSON

Allow Janet Jackson to assure you: Despite all of this divorce drama, everything is A-OK.

The pop icon, who is in the process of divorcing her third husband, took to Twitter to share a photo of her and her 3-month-old son, Eissa Al Mana. I can exclusively confirm, right here and right now, that he is a very good looking baby.

Kind of reeks of an attempted misdirection, doesn't it? I mean, this picture is the first time the 50-year-old has posted to Twitter since November of last year. Is Jackson trying to change the conversation?

If so, her soon to be ex-husband, Wissam Al Mana, is totally in on it. According to E! Online, the Qatari billionaire shared a heartfelt message on his personal website entitled "Love" directed at Jackson. "To the most beautiful person in the world, thank you for your divine love, your eternal support and for being my best friend," he wrote. "I love you so much, inshallah [God willing] we will be together in the Great Forever x." No word yet on why Al Mana has a personal website, or why he's using it as his personal, emo internet diary.

Anyway, that's a nice try, you guys. But a picture of a cute baby and a prose poem are not going to distract us from the delicious drama of your divorce, or the mysterious differences that led to your split.

Meet Britney Spears' not famous, mystery boyfriend

Britney's new beau is just 23. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES UNLESS STATED OTHERWISE

This weekend, Britney Spears shared her attempts at a candid photo of her and her boyfriend, Sam Asghari. The 35-year-old and her boyfriend were spending some time together in Malibu, which doesn't seem particularly exciting, but maybe visiting Malibu is their version of kink.

More importantly, you're probably wondering: Who even is Sam Asghari? Same. Here's what we know about the former Mousketeer's mystery dude.

He's 23 years young.
In March, the pair celebrated Asghari's 23rd birthday with a scenic hike and an Instagram picture. This appears to kind of be their thing.

A younger guy kind of makes sense for Spears who, no shade, sometimes appears to be suspended in a sort of permanent adolescence. But like, in a totally chill way.

They met on the set of her "Slumber Party" video.
The pop star opened up about meeting her beau while making an appearance on Amp 103.7's "Fast in the Morning." According to Just Jared, the two beautiful, boring people bonded over their love of sushi, which is basic AF. "I kept his number, and it was so weird because it was like five months later that I found my number in his bag." That's right. He wrote his number on a piece of paper instead of using his phone. Adorable. "I was like …' This guy was really cute!' so then I called him." OK!

Spears is right though, he is really cute.
Asghari moved to California from Iran nine years ago, and his face is really inoffensive to look at. He's got that classic combination of being young, tall, dark and handsome which is definitely not horrible.

Also he works as a personal trainer slash fitness model slash token hot guy in women's music videos, so. He's kind of living the dream.

This is definitely a win for Spears, and she deserves a win. Well done in catching yourself a hot, young thing, Spears. Not to be lame, but let's hope this relationship is anything but "Toxic," LOL.

Is Nina Dobrev dating Orlando Bloom, and why?

Orlando Bloom, like Johnny Depp before him, has found a new hot young thing to suck the youth out of. Hooray?

People reports that the two relatively attractive actors have decided this is the time to make the ill advised leap from friends to friends with benefits. A source — I'm assuming at this point it was Bloom's 6-year-old son, Flynn — tells the magazine that Bloom, 40, and Nina Dobrev, 28, are definitely not exclusive or anything. "Recently they've been hanging out as more than friends. It's super casual."

Desperate to prove that this relationship is indeed of the super chill variety, the "Elizabethtown" actor was reportedly all over a model named Ashley Haas while Dobrev partied 15 feet away at a Coachella party on Friday. Because it's not like, disrespectful. It's just like, casual.

And he's young and virile and definitely not past his prime, and he just needs everyone to know that, OK?

Bloom most recently dated Katy Perry, and they were the kind of couple you try to avoid at all costs. Dobrev, former star of "The Vampire Diaries," dated Ian Somerhalder, 38, for several years before splitting in 2013. So older dudes are kinda her thing.

Oh, and by the way? "Elizabethtown" was a major flop and is one of the worst films I've ever seen.

The Bond girl who told Hollywood to suck it

Gemma Arterton vastly prefers to make small films, like the World War II drama "Their Finest."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Gemma Arterton plays a screenwriter working on an inspirational English propaganda film during World War II in "Their Finest," now in theaters. STX ENTERTAINMENT

You might know Gemma Arterton as a Bond girl. When she started out, the English actress appeared in blockbusters like "Quantum of Solace," "Clash of the Titans," "Prince of Persia," even "Hansel & Gretel: Witch Hunters." She doesn't do those anymore. For the past five years, she's turned herself from Hollywood's next "It" girl into a serious and respected thespian who makes indies, in England and even in France. In fact, she just headlined George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in London.

This month, she's staring in "Their Finest," a docudrama that focuses on the English film industry during World War II. She plays a screenwriter hired to pen the female dialogue for a propaganda film — not an evil propaganda film, like you'd see made by today's American administration, but one meant to raise morale and inspire optimism among the English population as their country is blitzed by Axis powers.

The film they're making in "The Finest" is kind of like, if you'll allow the comparison, "Moonlight" meets "La La Land": It's socially conscious but it also wants to be mainstream entertainment.

It's what they say in the film: "authenticity infused with optimism." You want people to feel something they can relate to, but is also optimistic.

It's interesting how films come out and then an event will happen that makes it seem really relevant. I did this small film last year called "The Girl With All the Gifts," which came out after Brexit. It's all about people turning against foreigners and people who are different from them. It came out and it just felt so relevant. That's the weird thing about art.

GETTY

They take so long to make that there's no way to know what will happen before they come out. Then they seem to speak to the times, but by accident.

There's no way we could have known what was going to happen. I Just did a production of "Saint Joan" in London, and we decided to set it in the financial district now. When I'm on trial, all these men in suits are trying me. It felt so relevant after the election, and with what was going on with women in America speaking out. But we had decided to do it in that style six months before the election happened. People kept coming to see it and saying, "It's so relevant!"

You almost exclusively work in independent and even French films now, which is a shock to those who know you from blockbusters, like "Quantum of Solace," "Prince of Persia" and "Clash of the Titans."

Yeah, it's been quite a shift. It's been a really good shift, though. I wasn't very happy or at all fulfilled. It's like when you have loads of crap in your room. You just throw it out, and then you can see clearer. That's how I felt. I didn't need all of that crap, and it wasn't serving me. Now I can see properly and I've got space. It's much better that way.

Carrie Coon is one to watch in 'The Leftovers' and 'Fargo'

The actress stars in two of the season's most anticipated dramas.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Carrie Coon calls in from Calgary, Canada, on an early spring day when it's not quite cold enough so "the poor bastards" have to truck snow down from the mountains and wheelbarrow it all over the set.

She's wrapping "Fargo" Season 3, Noah Hawley's true crime anthology inspired by the Coen Brothers' 1996 film, which of course requires a heavy blanket of snow to get the full effect of characters mired in both the landscape and quandaries of their own making.

The actress has a leading role as police chief Gloria Burgle, a stoic single mother Coon describes as "the least Minnesota nice of the Minnesota nice sheriffs," after the film's Marge Gunderson (Frances McDormand) and "Fargo" Season 1's Detective Molly Solverson (Allison Tolman).

Carrie Coon as police chief Gloria Burgle on Season 3 of "Fargo," premiering Wed., April 19 on FX. FX

The 36-year-old also returns to "The Leftovers," which premiered its third and final season Sunday. In Damon Lindelof's apocalyptic drama, she stars opposite Justin Theroux as Nora Durst, a grief-stricken woman who struggles to make sense of a world that has mysteriously disappeared her husband and children, along with 140 million others.

On the surface, the shows don't have much in common, but I have felt they both depict doomed characters in hopeless situations. When I mention this to Coon, she laughs.

"I don't see it that way at all! Both of these shows reveal more about the viewer than they do any of us. Are you feeling doomed and hopeless, Kate?"

The Chicago native, whom you probably recognize as Ben Affleck's sister in "Gone Girl," says ultimately, both series are about how resilience gets people through the most maddening of circumstances. That reminder couldn't come at a better time.

"The Leftovers" has an apocalyptic bent, and with each season of "Fargo," you know things are bound to go wrong.

They share moral ambiguity. Noah [Hawley] and Damon [Lindelof] are similar. They're both very fine alembics for the time we're living in. In some ways I feel that the world has caught up with "The Leftovers." It's about collective grief and how we make meaning, and I feel that a lot of the people I know and love are really struggling to do that right now. Likewise, Noah is perfectly willing to put these characters we care about into challenging circumstances and the viewers watch them try to make sense of the world that they're in. There's never a pure moral victory in "Fargo." The hero is always flawed and they never win without a cost.

Any comparison between Gloria and Nora?

They both don't suffer fools. They have a kind of phlegmatic steadiness — although we see what happens with Nora of course is that that's bottled up. You're less likely to see Gloria explode. They both have a kind of abstemiousness; they're not self-indulgent people, these two. And I like to think I bring a sense of humor to my work even in the most serious worlds I'm moving through. Nora has a sly sense of humor and likewise Gloria has that sarcasm. My people in the Midwest have it, anyhow.

Right, you are Midwestern!

These are my people, through and through. This kind of stoicism and this quality of believing that bad things don't happen to good people and that there's a way to make sense of the world around us. That's definitely a hallmark of the place I grew up. Gloria's looking for a logical explanation for what's happening. And if the world is meaningless, that undermines her sense of purpose entirely.

Will we get any answers this final season of "The Leftovers"?

I found the ending — where we leave Nora — very satisfying. I love the kind of atavistic perspective we bring to the show by going down to Australia. There's a clash of cultures really, of the primitive roots of our spiritual life and the Judeo-Christian ethic we've been dealing with. For me that mystery is really stimulating. Nora is discovering the place just as we are. It could have been a really explosive, shocking ending, and instead the ending they chose is deeply personal and specific and about relationships. If you were to talk to [Damon] about his own world view, [he'd likely say] the meaning gets made between people, and that trumps everything else.

Coon also stars as Nora Durst on 'The Leftovers,' which premiered its third and final season Sunday night. HBO

RuPaul: 'Learning to love yourself is the most important thing'

Figuring out our personal motivations makes us human.

LUCÍA HERNÁNDEZ
MWN
letters@metro.us

RuPaul in and out of costume. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

The world's most famous and successful drag queen, RuPaul, premieres the eighth season of "RuPaul's Drag Race" on April 22 on VH1. He chats with us about the most concerning battle facing the LGBT community and how he stays centered in a world of Trump and division.

How do you keep the show fresh?

That's thanks to the participants. They are really the soul of the program. With their energy and freshness, they are the ones that have kept the show in force all this time. It is very interesting to meet them because many come from small towns from the U.S., where they have had to fight their own battles and demonstrate that they can live on their own terms. So, when they arrive to the show, they're superheroes and that's what makes them special in my eyes.

Do you remember any particular story?

Yes, in this eighth season Kim Chini, the queen of Korea, talked about her problems in a very funny way, acting them out and that was a great moment.

Now we have many queens who are internet stars — that is, they know about makeup, costumes but they do not have experience on a catwalk, acting or live presentations. So watching them evolve into more complete artists is a lot of fun.

The LGBT community continues to face many battles, which concerns you most?

The same one that every human being faces, which is not a gay right but a human right, and that is why everyone must rise. Beyond laws, we must discover that we have more in common with each other than what we believe. I believe that the greatest misunderstanding of human beings is believing that we are separated from one another or that we are different from each other. We are a single entity, and people forget that very easily and that is what hurts my heart. And if you think about it, it's the same thing that hurts us all. We are not separate.

What is "RuPaul's Drag Race" about?

The program brings together 12 of the best drag artists, who will have to go through countless extravagant and unpredictable challenges to demonstrate their charisma, uniqueness and talent. The crown is a cash prize of $10k and the title of "America's Next Drag Superstar," in addition to achieving greater exposure and winning more fans.

What is the message you would like to convey to younger people?

The same message I have had from the beginning: Learning to love yourself is the most important thing you can do in your life. Learn what you are, what makes you happy, what moves you, what motivates you to get out of bed and pursue it. What motivates me is love, laughter, beauty, dance, acting. Discovering those personal motivations is what makes us human.

On April 22, the eighth season of "RuPaul's Drag Race" premieres on VH1 at 9 p.m.

JOBS FOR THE FUTURE

A psychiatrist's salary isn't the only perk of the job

jobs & education

The demand for psychiatrists is continuing to grow. ISTOCK

LEARN ABOUT THE TOP CAREERS OF 2017

The United States has a huge shortage in the expanding field.

SARA FEINSTEIN
@SaraBFeinstein
sara.feinstein@metro.us

Those who are interested in the human element of medical care and the emotional rewards that come from interacting with patients might want to consider a career in psychiatry. And that's only one benefit of entering the field, which is slated to rapidly expand to meet the increase in demand for mental-health services.

We spoke to Dr. Tristan Gorrindo, a practicing psychiatrist and the director of education at the American Psychiatric Association to find out more about the profession.

What does a psychiatrist do?

Psychiatrists are physicians who work to treat disorders that affect the brain, says Gorrindo. "That can span the range from emotional related disorders all the way through substance abuse and other behavioral disorders," he says.

They make diagnoses and come up with treatment plans that can include talk therapy, medications or psychosocial interventions.

What schooling do you need to become a psychiatrist?

After completing their undergraduate program, prospective psychiatrists have to take the Medical College Admission Test, and then complete four years of medical school, says Gorrindo.

Then comes a residency in psychiatry, which is a minimum of four years — and that's only the beginning.

"If they want to specialize in child psychiatry for example, that's an additional two years, or addictions, that's another year," he says.

"I used to tell my family that I was finally going to graduate from 25th grade," says Gorrindo. "It's a long road, but a good road."

What's the typical salary for a psychiatrist?

The median annual salary for psychiatrist is $187,200 according to the most recent reports by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The best-paid 10 percent in the profession made $194,000, while the lowest-paid 10 percent made $61,3300.

Is it hard to find employment?

"It turns out the United States has a huge shortage of psychiatrists, so it is not difficult at all to get a job after you complete your residency," says Gorrindo.

In fact, the Bureau of Labor Statistics expects the profession to grow 15 percent from 2014 to 2024, resulting in 4,200 new jobs.

The pros

According to Gorrindo, the best part of psychiatry is that "we still get to spend a significant amount of time with our patients and really get to know them and their life story.

"Many times you're really connected to your patient for months, or even years, and so getting to see your patients get better, re-engage in the world and get their lives back on track is very rewarding," he says. "It's one of the things that I'm most grateful for."

The cons

One of the biggest issues psychiatrists face is the stigma surrounding mental illness, Gorrindo says.

Not only does that keep people from seeking care, but it contributes to inequity in the health-care system.

"Sometimes insurance companies have special sets of rules for treating mental-health conditions that they don't have for treating more traditional medical illnesses, so we're constantly having to fight those kind of administrative battles."

Heading back to home ice, can the Bruins take care of business at TD Garden and take a series lead? GETTY IMAGES

Game 3: Bruins look to take back control as series shifts to Boston

The Bruins and Senators are tied at one game apiece as the first round continues.

RICH SLATE
@Richslate
sports@metro.us

By winning Game 1 in Ottawa, 2-1 on Wednesday, the Bruins set themselves up in good position to win their first round playoff series versus the Senators. Of course, losing Game 2, particularly in the spectacular fashion that they did (blowing a two-goal third period lead and falling 4-3 in OT on Saturday), left Boston with a bad taste in their mouths as they head back to TD Garden for the pivotal Game 3 on Monday (7, NESN) and Game 4 on Wednesday (7:30, NESN). Still either way, who thought that this would be an easy series? Both clubs are clearly very close in terms of talent level not to mention all the mounting injuries on each side, so it's no wonder that it seems destined to go six or even seven games (that'll probably almost all be decided by one or two goals at most).

These are the first playoff games for interim head coach Bruce Cassidy in charge of the Bruins and if the first two tilts in Ottawa were any indication, his team is in for a serious test from their Atlantic Division rival.

"A team that's behind, they're at home, they're desperate, they're going to push hard and they did. We saw the same script on Wednesday [after the B's trailed 1-0 but rallied for a pair of third period goals]," Cassidy said. "We did it to them. What's disappointing is that we are generally pretty good at closing out games."

After a scoreless first period in Game 2, Boston scored three goals in the second period including a shorthanded goal by right wing Tim Schaller and a power-play goal by Patrice Bergeron that put them firmly in control at 3-1 late in the frame. Ottawa was desperate as they couldn't afford to leave town trailing 2-0 in the series, so defenseman Chris Wideman scored on a screened shot from the point then center Derick Brassard tied it on a one-timer thanks to a slick spin move by their best player-defenseman Erik Karlsson. Senators captain Dion Phaneuf ended it just 1:59 into the extra session, blasting one from the point, seconds after Boston had killed off a terrible penalty on its own captain Zdeno Chara (who was called for delay of game after putting the puck over the glass in his own end).

SEASONS SINCE BOSTON'S LAST PLAYOFF SERIES WIN, IN 2013-14 OVER DETROIT

It's hard to fathom, but the Bruins have lost a defenseman in four straight games, dating back to the final two contests of the regular season. Torey Krug (lower-body) and Brandon Carlo (upper-body) have yet to appear in the series while Colin Miller (lower-body) got hurt in Game 1 on a nasty knee-to-knee hit and Adam McQuaid (upper-body) departed early in Game 2 after blocking a shot. As you can imagine, this has left Boston's defensive corps in tatters. Luckily for them, 19-year-old rookie Charlie McAvoy (who just a couple weeks ago was still playing for BU) has stepped in right away (paired with Chara, who is old enough to be his father) and looked like a dependable veteran which is slightly shocking. Carlo skated on Sunday but he was termed "day-to-day and doubtful for Game 3." Boston doesn't want to have to dip much further into the depths of their roster (or the Providence Bruins) after Joe Morrow played his first game on Saturday since Jan. 22.

The 2017 Boston Marathon will see a return of world-wide competition.

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

Perhaps no single day in Boston is bigger and more important than Patriots' Day, better known around these parts as Marathon Monday.

While the historical aspect of the day in our nation's history can't be forgotten — the anniversary of the Battles of Lexington and Concord — the celebration is made by those making the 26.2 mile run from Hopkinton all the way to Boston's Boylston Street.

Consider it a 26.2 mile celebration of hard work, determination, perseverance and unity that not only describes the individuals in the race but the city they are racing in, especially after the bombings that occurred at the finish line in 2013.

Whether it's overcoming physical or emotional hurdles, running for a charity, or just simply reaching that "runner's high," there are plenty of reasons for the 30,000-plus men and women to partake in the 121st Boston Marathon.

And there are plenty of reasons to cheer them on from the sidelines, whether at the start, along the infamous Heartbreak Hill or down the stretch on Boylston Street.

And this year, fans will be treated to a more competitive marathon. Last year, many of the top runners in the world didn't run in the Boston Marathon due to the Rio Summer Olympics later in the year. That isn't the case this time around, as many return to Boston in hopes of winning one of the most important marathons in the world, and $150,000.

Americans

You know the name Meb Keflezighi. The American won the Boston Marathon back in 2014, becoming the first American since 1983 to do so. You can bet the 41-year-old will be a huge draw after his announcement that this will be his final competitive year of racing. Galen Rupp, on the other hand, is just starting out. The 30-year-old is making his Boston Marathon debut, coming off a bronze medal at the Rio Olympics in the marathon (2:10:05). He looks to be America's best bet to bring home a win. Will a nagging foot injury prevent it? And keep an eye on Jared Ward, who finished sixth in the Rio Olympics (2:11:30).

Local favorite Shalane Flanagan had to withdraw from this year's race due to a back injury. That's a blow to the American women's chances, but there are still a couple names to be on the lookout for. Jordan Hasay, just 25 years old, is making her Boston Marathon debut, and looking to make some noise, too. She just recently placed sixth in the Prague Half Marathon with a 67:55 time, third fastest ever by an American woman, according to the running website competitor.com. And Desi Linden should be a familiar name, as Linden finished second in the 2011 Boston Marathon and seventh in the Rio Olympics (2:26:08).

World

Lemi Berhanu from Ethiopia is your defending champion after finishing last year's race with a 2:12:45 time. But that time was actually the slowest winning time since 2007. When you consider many of the top racers skipped last year's race, Berhanu will have to run faster this time around. Look for his fellow countryman Yemane Tsegaye, who finished third last year, near him. And you can always count on the Kenyans to compete. Wesley Korir, who won in 2012, will look to end Kenya's first-place drought.

Atsede Baysa from Ethiopia looks to defend her crown after an impressive come-from-behind win last year. Fellow Ethiopian Buzunesh Deba, who was awarded the first-place honor in 2014 after Rita Jeptoo was banned for doping, holds the course record at 2:19:59. And again, there are many Kenyans with a chance to win, including 2015 winner Caroline Rotich.

FANTASY BASEBALL: DON'T DO WHAT'S POPULAR, AVOID ZIMMERMAN, GRAVEMAN

@amoralpanic

Picking up a guy like Ryan Zimmermanm based on name recognition alone might not be so smart. GETTY IMAGES

Each of the major fantasy platforms allows you to view transaction trends across all leagues — which players other owners are flocking to or running from en masse. Should you follow the wisdom of the crowds or go against the grain? Let's find out.

Popular adds

Hitter: Ryan Zimmerman, 1B, Washington Nationals
Zimmerman has come flying out of the gate in 2017, hitting .341/.386/.659 with three homers in his first 11 games. After posting easily the worst season of his career last year, fantasy owners are clearly buying a resurgence. A closer look, however, suggests they should be a bit more skeptical. Zimmerman is enjoying some fortune on batted balls (.407 BABIP) and currently boasts a HR/FB% that is twice his career average. There's been no real change in his approach or swing to support those numbers. Toss in the fact that he hasn't played a full season since 2013 and is striking out more often than ever before, and the verdict is clear. Avoid.

Pitcher: Kendall Graveman, SP, Oakland Athletics
Graveman established himself as your typical innings eater last season, using a groundball-heavy approach and limiting walks enough to post serviceable numbers. He's opened the season with a 2-0 record, 2.00 ERA, and 1.00 WHIP in three starts. Those are some nice, round numbers… but so is his strand rate, which currently checks in at 100%. Obviously, that's unsustainable. Graveman is also benefiting from a .204 BABIP (career .290) despite allowing a higher rate of quality contact than ever before, and still having trouble keeping the ball in the yard. Avoid.

Popular drops

Hitter: Byron Buxton, OF, Minnesota Twins
So far this season, Buxton has come to the plate 42 times. He has struck out in exactly half of those opportunities, while walking once. He has only four hits — two singles and two doubles — and one stolen base. In short, this is exactly the kind of start nobody wanted to see from Buxton. The former top prospect is still just 23, but the contact issues that have plagued him at the big-league level don't appear to have gone away. Owners in dynasty leagues should continue to be patient, but those in redraft formats can feel free to explore other options. Cut.

Pitcher: Matt Shoemaker, SP, Los Angeles Angels
Shoemaker has a reputation for inconsistency, and he's come by it honestly. He's made 74 starts since the beginning of the 2014 season. 16 times, he's allowed four or more runs. 15 times, he's allowed zero. What makes Shoemaker such a volatile asset? Simple — he's entirely reliant on his splitter. When it's working, he is often dominant. When it's not, he's a batting-practice pitcher, prone to giving up home runs in bunches. He's allowed four homers in 15 innings so far this season. Cut.

Aries See each matter through to the end. Don't rely on others to take care of your responsibilities. Stay focused on what's important and be cautious about your health.

Taurus Take the initiative and go after what you want. Don't let anyone stop you from reaching your goals. Stick to your plan and finish what you start.

Gemini Look at what you have, not at what you lack. It's up to you to choose how to live. Don't let others make choices for you. Do what makes you happy.

Cancer Don't worry about what others are doing. Stay focused on what's important to you. Live in the moment and surround yourself with the things and people that matter.

Leo Get work out of the way before you tend to personal matters. Someone will pressure you if you make a promise without delivering on it.

Virgo Set high standards and live up to your promises. You have plenty to gain if you maintain a positive attitude and are open to unusual approaches.

Libra Ask before you make changes at home that might not sit well with a partner or someone you live with. Getting the green light will help you avoid a setback.

Scorpio Choose to put greater emphasis on personal pursuits, romance and relationships. The less communication with your colleagues, employer or institutions, the better.

Sagittarius If you want to make changes, go about it the right way. If permission is required, seek it out first, and if you need more information, do your research.

Capricorn Say what's on your mind and clear the air. You'll feel better and will be free to move forward with your plans once you know you have nothing to hide.

Aquarius Don't let temptation lead you down the wrong path. Be responsible, and if you really want to make a move or change, do so for the right reason.

Pisces Follow your intuition when dealing with your peers or negotiating a contract. Advancement can be yours if you ask for more responsibility. EUGENIA LAST
